ELECTION LAWS QUESTIONED IN NEWBERRY CASE

FIXING EXPENSE FUNDS IS DOUBTED.

DEMURRER FILED

Says Congress Has No Right to Constitute Charges As Crime.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 29.—Constitutionality of the United States election laws was questioned in a demurrer attacking the indictments against Senator Truman H. Newberry and 124 others, filed today by Martin V. Littleton, counsel for the respondents. The demurrer also sets forth that a majority of the counts in the indictments do not constitute offenses against the United States.

The demurrer holds that not only are no charges constituted in the indictments, but that Congress of the United States had no authority to constitute as a crime any of the acts set forth as offenses in the first five counts of the indictment. Though the general election law of June 25, 1910, it is claimed, attempts to deny the right of the people of Michigan to make and amend laws governing their political elections and themselves.

Constitution Violated, Claim.

In this connection, the claim is made that this act violates the constitution of the United States by interfering with the sovereign rights of the various states. Congress, the demurrer adds, is without authority to enact laws regulating the rights and conduct of citizens in any state who may become candidates in nominating conventions, in primary elections or in a general election.

The general election law is unconstitutional, it adds, for the reason that congress has no authority to prescribe qualifications for members of the house or of the senate, in sections 2 and 3 of Article I of the constitution of the United States, which, in effect, makes congress judge of the qualifications of its own members.

No Right to Fix Expenses.

The claim is also submitted to the court as a basis for setting aside the indictments, that congress has no authority to fix the maximum amount which may be spent by any candidate in seeking nomination or election, and that in this limit of $10,000 it becomes grossly discriminatory as among the 48 states.

IDEAL STATE RULES TO BE MAPPED OUT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cleveland, O., Dec. 29.—Many radical proposals for an ideal state constitution will be voted on at a modern constitutional convention today, the feature event of a three-day convention of the "National Municipal League," held in conjunction with the annual conference of the National Association of Civic Secretaries. Simultaneous meetings will be held by the American Education Association, the American Political Science Association. The result of these sessions will be referred to a committee on state government with instructions to draw the best model state constitution for submission to next year's convention. Among other things they call for a one-house legislature which would elect a legislative council. The chairman of the council would become governor of the state without veto or executive powers. An administrative manager, to be appointed by the council, would appoint and remove all department heads and commissions. The chief officers of the state would be prepared to introduce bills, instigate investigations, and supervise and direct the work of the governor.

THREE IMPORTANT MATTERS BEFORE COUNCIL TONIGHT

When Mayor Walsh holds the council at the city hall at 5 o'clock tonight, he will be calling to order one of the most important meetings of the council this year, at which time it is predicted business will be transacted that will affect every citizen, directly or indirectly.

At least three significant matters are on the docket for action tonight. They are:

A vote on the Samson Tractor company's petition to vacate Center street, from Franklin street east to the river.

Building on a new ordinance to regulate building of all kinds and providing for appointment of a building inspector.

A vote on the proposal to pave 70 blocks of streets in the city in 1920.

In addition to disposing of these three matters, the council is expected to elect its representatives to the new city planning commission of seven members created by the ordinance adopted at the meeting two weeks ago. As soon as the council's representative is chosen, the commission will meet to organize and act on civic betterment projects, Mayor Walsh states.

After hanging fire for months it is believed the building code is now in shape for final passage. Alderman George Paulz and City Attorney Roger C. Cunningham made numerous minor changes in the proposed ordinance during the past week as requested by councilmen when it was given its first and second readings several months ago. The ordinance has been passed by a John A. Quinn, city planner, be one of the best codes he has ever seen in his years of experience with leading cities.

Some discussion in regard to the 1920 paving program is expected to arise when the plans adopted at a recent meeting of the board of public works and the highway committee are presented tonight.

The meeting will be the final one of the year 1919.

LINEN INDUSTRY IS RECOVERING FROM BLOW DEALT BY WAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, France, Dec. 29.—Recovery of the white goods industry in France from the blow dealt by the war has been retarded, it is said here, by the shortage of raw materials, however, the industry is recovering, and the outlook for the district around Lille is steadily growing in rebuilt factories. These new structures are raising their production of white goods to the level of the pre-war period, and confusion, presenting a strange picture to the eye.

Only 1,500 persons are at work in the district around Lille, according to information given the correspondent of the Associated Press today. Only one of these is working on the cotton sheeting. Power in the other two plants is only available at intermittent periods because the Germans took away generators, boilers, and copper, with the result that the mills are forced to resort to makeshifts to get electric energy.

One of the big problems at Amsterdams is to find shelter for the workers whose homes were wrecked by shell fire.

Government statistics say the linen industry as a whole has resumed operations in one-third of the mills but with only a little more than 5 percent of the pre-war force. Officials express confidence that the industry will be back to normal by the end of the year.

NEWS' HALF SISTER CALLED IN DEFENSE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.—Among the latest to be called today at the trial of Harry New, who is accused of the murder of his fiancée, Freda Lesser, will be Miss Edna Clancy, half sister of the accused, according to counsel for the defense, who predicted her testimony would place "the unfortunate death of Freda Lesser in a different light."

Defense counsel also indicated an attempt would be made to prove that New had performed a noble marriage to Miss Lesser a few hours before her death. The attorneys said this testimony would be offered to refute the claim of the prosecution that New had several weeks before the death of Miss Lesser last July he would not marry her and deliberately planned her death.

COAL COMMISSION LAYS OUT PROGRAM AT MEETING TODAY

Washington, Dec. 29.—Members of the commission named by President Wilson under the coal strike settlement to investigate wages and prices in the bituminous coal industry, conferred with Secretary Tumulty today at the White House. The commission is expected to lay out a program for its work at meetings during the day.

Members of the executive committee of the Bituminous Coal Operators' association also were in the city and it was expected that the operators finally would tender their assistance to the commission in its work, in spite of objections that have been made by the operators to the government's plan.

Under the agreement with the miners made by Attorney General Palmer with President Wilson's authorization, work has been resumed at the mines, a 14 percent increase in wages has been given the miners and government fixed prices on coal of $2.35 per ton mine run at the mine have been retained. The commission is empowered to grant further increases if found necessary, and has been requested to reach a decision within 60 days.

The members of the commission are Henry H. Rogers, chairman, California; Rambrandt Peale, representing the operators; and John P. White, representing the miners.

TREATY FACTIONS CENTER ATTENTION ON COMPROMISES

REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC SENATORS FAVOR PLAN OF THREE MODIFICATIONS.

CHANGE PART TEN

Language Used by President Eliminated in Revised Article.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 29.—Republican and Democratic senators working for a peace treaty compromise centered their attention today on a plan said to have been accepted by the mid reservation republicans and a number of democrats for ratification with three modifications in the 14 reservations approved by the senate majority at the last session.

The three changes, which some senators believe would make the reservations acceptable to the third deal with the probable declaration that the qualifications must be acquired in the other powers, would be to delete the language "The mid group believes that Senator Lodge, republican leader, will be willing to make these changes and accept the treaty with the other democrats, also will be satisfied with them. It was said, however, that neither of the party heads had yet expressed a final opinion.

Article Ten Reworded

Under the new preamble suggested, the senate reservations would be regarded as accepted by the other parties to the treaty unless specific objection were made within a limited time. The wording of the article ten reservation would be changed so as to eliminate the language which President Wilson regarded as offensive and to substitute an affirmative declaration that the article's obligations are accepted with the understanding that future congresses shall be at liberty to decide questions of peace and war. Language which some senators have regarded as offensive to other powers would be modified in the Shantung reservation.

Many Senators Absent

Although compromise talk on this and other modification plans continues among the senators remaining here, many senators are absent, but no concrete action is expected until the senate reassembles next Monday.

BANKERS OF NATION CALLED TO MEETING

Washington, Dec. 29.—Representative bankers from over the country have been invited to meet in Washington January 6 to discuss the existing relations between federal reserve bank discount rates and interest rates on deposits.

The conference is the first step of the federal reserve bank to iron out the existing tangle of relations between federal reserve bank discount rates and interest rates on deposits which resulted from war financing. Governor Harding said, in a letter to the chairman of the federal reserve bank from Governor Harding.

"Early in 1918," said the letter, "there was a disposition on the part of large banks all over the country to indulge in sharp competition for bank deposits. This led to a reduction on the part of interior banks and the bidding for business by marking up interest rates on deposits. There would be no better calendar. The financial operations of the government.

"The board wishes to be free to appoint a committee to study the problem of bringing about a proper control of credit. But it is anxious at the same time to avoid a disturbance of the whole banking situation."

Girl Garbed in Soldier Uniform Is New Angle In Brown Murder Case

Battle Creek Woman Mentioned by Miss Summit as Threatening to Get Slain Man; Held by Police.

[By Associated Press.]

Mount Clemens, Mich., Dec. 29.—Macomb county authorities were today investigating a new angle of the slaying of J. Stanley Brown, son of Detroit manufacturer, whose body was found in his automobile on the road from Detroit last Wednesday morning.

The new information was a statement by Miss Gladys Summit, who came here late last night from Battle Creek and gave the officers a story involving a young woman who until last Saturday, lived in Battle Creek, and who, Miss Summit declared, had been much in Brown's company just prior to his death.

The girl, whose name Miss Summit gave to the officers, left Battle Creek for Mount Clemens early last week, the statement says, after borrowing a uniform from a soldier stationed at Camp Custer. She returned to Battle Creek Wednesday afternoon, Miss Summit declared, with a large sum of money and attired in new and expensive clothing. Later when informed of Brown's death by Miss Summit, the girl displayed unusual interest and inquired if her name was mentioned by the newspaper reports.

Bride, Groom, of 50 Years Ago Observe Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harris, Evansville, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home, 260 East Main street, Christmas evening. Fifty relatives, neighbors and old time friends were present.

The house was beautifully decorated with the colors of the holiday season. The bride and groom of 50 years ago stood under an arch of chrysanthemums. The guests were greeted by Master Eugene Ballard, Mrs. Adell Ballard, and Miss Cora E. Harris. Others in the receiving line were the bride and groom and the bride's two brothers, W. A. Tolles, Evansville, and F. W. Tolles, Milwaukee, and their wives.

Throughout the evening an orchestra composed of Miss Cora Harris, piano, F. R. Holmes, violin, Earl W. Tolles, cornet, played numerous appropriate selections which delighted the guests because of their old time melodies. During the evening program the bride of 50 years danced with her guests and showed that she was "not so old after all."

Charles Schenckel, St. Louis, was a special guest. He is the son of the late Mrs. Drummond Davis, who was a schoolmate of both the bride and groom. Pleased the gathering with several vocal selections, Mrs. Adell Harris Ballard, daughter of the couple, gave several readings. One selection, "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," was given with musical accompaniment.

Although the invitations had read "No Presents," the bride and groom of many years ago were presented with several books, a large number of bouquets of flowers, and a silverware set with gold trimmings.

Delicious refreshments were served.

WILD GEESSE LOSE OUT IN RACE WITH AVIATOR

Dallas, Tex., (By Mail).—Wild geese, contrary to popular belief, are not in speed nor in maneuvering, and the pigeon, swiftest of the winged creatures, is outclassed by the flying man, writes a local dealer, and hunters corroborate their statements.

To prove his ship faster than the wild geese, one aviator climbed into the sky and flew around a great V-shaped dove flying north. The geese at first held their formation, but when the plane was but a few yards from them they became panic-stricken. As the big machine dived at them several of the geese folded their wings and dropped like plumes toward the earth. Several hundred feet below the airplane they fluttered out, in each time the aviator approached they folded their wings and dropped.

An aviator dare not dash into a flock of geese, for collision with them would wreck his plane. Accidents due to collision with birds in air have wrecked airplanes and in at least two cases caused the death of the pilots.

ILLINOIS LAUNCHES STUPENDOUS PROGRAM OF ROAD BUILDING; LEADING CITIES TO BE CONNECTED; LICENSE FEES TO PAY COST

Above: Concrete road construction in Illinois (left) and laying brick for Illinois state roads. Below: W. G. Edens; crushed stone for state roads in Illinois.

Illinois, this month, launched the most stupendous program of road building in the history of the world. It comprises 5,000 miles of a vast trunk line system, connecting all the important cities, and the cost will be $60,000,000. This entire sum will be raised by license fees. To William G. Edens, of Chicago, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, is due a large measure of the credit for the successful campaign in behalf of a state aid road system.

ST. PAUL FREIGHT DEPOT HERE TO BE ENLARGED IN 1920

Following closely upon the heels of the report that the local Chicago Northwestern freight depot is to be enlarged to double its present capacity came the announcement today that plans are being completed for improvements and enlargements of the freight station of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road here.

Final details remain to be worked out before the proposed changes can be made public. A start on the work of enlargement will be made soon, said Fred W. Zimmerman, agent.

Crowded conditions which have greatly hampered and delayed shipping conditions have been experienced at the station for the past five months he said. Recent investigations by company officials suggested immediate enlargement.

He is being adopted and given a home and education by some good family in Janesville. The lucky family will be chosen by Judge Maxfield within a few days after he has considered all applications.

Thirty families in Janesville want to adopt him while one call has been received from an Evansville family. All desire to give him a good home and an education.

Winter Wheat Acreage in Texas Is Half of Last Year

Houston, Tex., (By Mail).—Texas winter wheat acreage planted this fall is estimated to be 1,077,000 acres, or about one-half of last year's, according to E. M. Johnston, field agent for Texas.

"This marked reduction has been caused almost wholly by the excessive fall rains, which prevented seeding, although labor scarcity has also been a factor."

"The greatest acreage reduction has been in the black land belt of north and central Texas where but 25 percent of last year's acreage has been planted."

Paul Claire.—Another publication has succumbed to the soaring costs of newspaper publication. Georgia Decal, publisher of the New Auburn Times, a weekly, announces the suspension of publication and his retirement.

Reading a Landscape.
By Irene L. Clavess.
Francis W. Parker School.
"Gee," sighed Frank, "I'd like to be alive a hundred thousand years from now to see what this canyon will be like by that time."

"Yes, or a hundred thousand years ago," agreed John. "I'll bet there wasn't even a gully here then."

These boys knew that the pretty little limestone canyon, 20 feet deep, with a tiny stream at the bottom, which they had been exploring, had not always been there. They knew that it would not keep its present form forever. And they knew that when you look at any landscape, you can read its past and forecast its future.

which they had been exploring, had not always been there. They knew that it would not keep its present form forever. And they knew that when you look at any landscape, you can read its past and forecast its future.

They like to imagine the day long past, when there were arid conditions where they now live, and when great icebergs ground each other to pieces in the channel of mighty rushing rivers, where only a pile of boulders, in a dry valley, remain today.

When these boys tramp over a long gravel ridge, even though it is miles from any lake, they know that only a few days ago the ridge was sand and gravel. So they say, "There must have been a lake here once. When they see a hill of pure sand, they say, 'This is an ancient sand dune.' This is a sand dune. When they climb over the clay hills, with occasional swampy spots, they recognize the pieces of an ancient wheel. Other hills they can see have been left when rivers have cut away the soil on either side. If Frank and John lived in the mountains, they might see hills that were made by the folding of rock when the interior of the earth shrank. If they ever go to the mountains, they might see hills that were made by the folding of rock when the interior of the earth shrank. If they ever go to the mountains, they might see hills that were made by the folding of rock when the interior of the earth shrank.

THIRTY EAT POISONED DOG AND ARE KILLED

London, Eng.—A tragic occurrence, resulting in the death of 30 Chinese, is reported in the North China Herald.

It appears that a dog owned by a wealthy Canton merchant was bitten by a poisonous snake and died a few days later. The owner, to a coolie to remove the dog for burial, but the man, after pretending to obey the order, sold the body to a Chinese hawk. The latter, being unaware that the dog had died from poisoning, prepared a delectable dish from its remains and sold it.

Over 40 coolies bought the food and ate it, and a few hours later several fell dead in the street. Thirty of the Chinese hawkers, who had been under hospital treatment.

The man who sold the dog and the hawk have been arrested by the Canton police on the charge of murder.

MARRIED WOMAN

London, Eng.—By an extraordinary mistake a gypsy at Nuncheon has wedded the wrong woman. He was told by the priest that he could marry by proxy, so that, instead of the bride-elect appearing at the parish church, her sister deputized for her. The priest, however, had been informed of the legality of the marriage with his sweetheart's sister, the man was greatly surprised, and the wedding ceremony in the local gypsy fraternity. The husband absolved the curate from blame.

MAN OF 76 THING FOR THE FOURTH TIME

Knoxville, Pa.—It is a cold day when Sidney Hart of this village, not engaged in growing a new set of nature's teeth. None of the store brand made by the sacrilegious hand of man in his.

He has during this year been growing his third set, and they are now coming out to make room for the fourth set.

When a man gets to be 70 or thereabouts he ought to be immune from tooth-ache and such, but not so with Uncle Sid. "Three times and out" may be the maximum of some, but not with him. Mr. Hart is growing his fourth crop, and what there is back of it no one knows.

"COUSIN" THUGGED HIM

Chester, Pa.—Throwing her arms around Samuel Goldstein as he stood on a street corner, Miss Kiyy Morality insisted he was her cousin, whom she had not seen since he sailed for overseas a couple of years ago and whom she had been mourning as dead. Goldstein convinced her he was not her relative and left. An hour or two later he discovered that his wallet, containing $120, was missing.

Goldstein caused the Morality girl's arrest and Police Magistrate Berry held her for trial.

Homes of the Muskrat.
By Adella Belle Beardi.
He is very active just now, the muskrat—no sleeping through the winter for him. The only terror cold weather brings is the deadly trap which springs and catches him without warning. Once in its clutches, it is all up with the dog, for damages.

Slaughter said he had just been demoralized when the incident occurred and was suffering from malaria. His wife said that when a police sergeant visited the home to get particulars of the assault the dog sat upon his haunches and shook hands with the officer. (Laughter.) The Judge: It was evidently anxious to make friends with law and order.

His honor, refusing to give damages, said there was no evidence that the dog was other than of gentle disposition and there was not one word against its character.

THE MUSKRAT IS ABOUT TWO FEET LONG, ONE INCH IN DIAMETER.

of the beaver. The burrow is quite elaborate with numerous galleries, some leading to the several rooms from under the water front door and others extending inland with back doors opening on dry land. When these burrows cave in, they are liable to do some damage to levees and dams as well as fields.

The house stands in shallow water and looks like a heap of drifted sticks, marsh grass, and reeds. Grooved by growing reeds, and held together with mud. Above water level, there is a room from which several passages lead downward, the entrance is under water.

You can not get very near the muskrat house without a boat, because the marshy ground is so insecure, to try it means being very spry and jumping instantly from one sinking foothold to another—all have done it. Keep your gun going over your shoulder. (Tenants of the Barn.)

DOG'S CHARACTER CLEARED

London, Eng.—A dog which did not appreciate the "muskrat" played on Police day by some boys on Rotten and old tins, was mentioned at South-wark county court.

The boy, it was stated, played and sang patriotic songs outside the Police public house, Drake street, Blackfriars, "creating a terrible din." Suddenly the door of the public house opened and a dog ran out and bit one of the boys, Cecil Cook. Recently, through his father, he sued the dog's owner, the owner of the dog, for damages.

PROTEST MORMON CHURCH ACTIVITIES IN ENGLAND

London, Eng.—A wave of protest is sweeping over England against the renewal of Mormon activities in this country. One correspondent of the Daily Mail who has been investigating the effects of the Mormon propaganda and the work of Mormon agents among English women and girls writes:

"Men wearing the uniform of American soldiers met young women and induced them to join the sect. No reflection is cast upon the American army and, so far as I can learn, these recruiting agents for emigration to the United States were Mormons who had joined up and come over with their respective regiments."

SECRETS OF THE UNDERWORLD

London, Eng.—The public health committee of Southwark report that a letter has been received from the L. C. C. to the effect that complaint has been made by one of the Metropolitan Police of the practice of certain undertakers keeping bodies at their premises for a considerable time before interment.

"It appears," says the report, "that the question has arisen primarily with a view to observance of decency in connection with the interment of the bodies of children, which, it would seem, are retained by undertakers on payment of a small fee until an opportunity presents itself for disposal by interment in the coffin with an auditor by other means."

TOUCHING A SORE SPOT.

General Pershing touched British military pride on the raw when, in his final report on the American army's operations in France, he said the allied armies were admittedly in serious danger of defeat in June, 1918, and that the entry of the Americans in force changed the tide of battle and precipitated the victorious culmination of the war.

As was inevitable, some Jackdaw of the British press was bound to resent the American claim, but, contrary to expectations, the first criticism made by the editor of the London Sketch, instead of being severe in its bitterness was of a serio-comic nature—and the typical British editor is at his worst when he essays to be funny. After contemptuous reference to the buttons inscribed "we did it," worn by some American soldiers after the armistice was signed, the London editor asks:

"What did the United States win? Was it the Mexican or the Spanish wars? Which war was won by all those British and French boys who lie from Ypres to the Alps? And if America won the war with Germany, hasn't she been making up for it ever since by doing her best to lose her sense of humor?"

The great outstanding fact that the war would have been lost by the allies if America had not gone to the rescue was known by all fair-minded men long before General Pershing made his report. It was practically acknowledged at the beginning of June, 1918, when the premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy, with the approval of Marshal Foch, sent President Wilson a message saying that "there is grave danger of the war being lost unless the numerical inferiority of the allies can be remedied as rapidly as possible," and urging him to make continuous dispatch of infantry and machine gunners in the months of June and July "to avert the immediate danger of an allied defeat in the present campaign owing to the allied reserves being exhausted before those of the enemy."

American troops were poured into France, and what was the result? The tide of battle was changed, as General Pershing said, and the American troops precipitated the victorious culmination of the war. Here are several questions and answers for the British editor to consider:

When the Hun hordes were on the road to Paris what stopped them? The gallant little vanguard of Americans.

Who swooped through the "impregnable" Argonne forest like wildfire? The American soldiers.

What troops were commanding the heights before Sedan when the war came to an end? The American.

What troops went forward, never backward? The glorious young Americans.

What troops made unnecessary a 1919 campaign, for which the British and French were preparing with feverish energy? The same glorious young Americans.

Yes, we admit that Americans are occasionally boastful, but every time they are called upon they "deliver the goods."

JUSTICE, NOT REVENGE.

As plans are developed for the trial of Germans accused of war crimes, it should be remembered that the object of the prosecutions is justice, not vengeance. As much as the barbarism of the enemy in the occupied regions aroused the wrath of those peoples who suffered, it is not in the spirit of bitterness that the offenders will be called to the bar. So many months have passed since cessation of hostilities that passions have considerably cooled.

But though resentment may not be as hot now as a year ago, this is not added reason why the program of the supreme council should be carried through without hesitation. Could trials have been held immediately the Germans might ever after have alleged that their cases were prejudiced. Now sufficient perspective can be obtained to make impartial any such protest.

The prosecutions are naturally divided into two classes, those of leaders who ordered crimes, or with authority to prevent crime permitted it; and the subordinates who committed the atrocities. Chief among the former is William Hohenzollern. To prosecute the officers and men directly responsible and permit the former Kaiser to go untried would be a perversion of justice. And to give William his due and overlook those who carried out his mandates, express or implied, would equally fail of justice. All who connived at or tolerated terrorism must be held into court.

The world has an opportunity to establish a precedent that will deter men from savagery.

THE PINE TREE MAY FREE US.

Christmas trees in New York this year sold as low as twenty-five cents that last season and the one before brought from $1.25 each upwards. An oversupplied market was the cause.

Attracted by soaring prices in 1917, nurserymen everywhere rushed to cultivate trees. As a natural sequence the bottom fell out of the market when the supply this year exceeded the demand.

In these days of high costs of living going higher all the time, we might all stop a minute and consider how easily we might change the whole scale of prices if workmen and manufacturers and producers of every article toil for increased production. There are those who still argue that greater turnout will not lower living

JUST FOLKS

FRIENDS.
We can boast of gold and silver, that's a human thing to do.
And we talk a lot of riches in a thoughtless sort of way.
But the friends we always cling to and the friends we know are true.
Are not measured by their money or the jewels they display.
We pick them for their courage or their kindly words of cheer.
Not the fortune they have gathered or their bit of earthly fame.
If we look our true friends over, those we've known from year to year,
We'd like them if they never had a dollar to their name.

Take the pal that shares your pleasures and is always at your side.
And ask yourself exactly why it is you like him so.
Why you want him near you always when your soul is being tried.
And why you're clinging to him as the finest man you know.
It is something he possesses that in words cannot be told.
Something deeper far than glory or the place that he may claim.
It's the man he is that grips you, not his stock of yellow gold.
You'd like him if he never had a dollar to his name.

The things that count are common and not given to display.
We hear the clink of money, but a kindly nature's still.
While pomp and fame and glory travel proudly on their way.
We choose our friends regardless of their fortune or their skill.
They've stood by us in sorrow and they've shared our pleasures, too.
Or our rainy days or sunny we have found them just the same.
They're not chosen for their fortune or the deeds that they can do.
We'd like them if they never had a dollar to their name.

costs. Do they need any further argument than this actual example?

What we need to do is to stop all foolish wrangling and striking. Instead of cutting down the number of hours of labor and increasing wages, we might better increase the number of hours of labor. Every hour that passes at this period without a wheel of industry turning means so much added to the high cost of living. The pine tree was once an emblem of freedom. It might still be—from the clutch of sky-rocketing prices.

The fear of distillers that the stock of John Barleycorn will be obliged to die by evaporation will bring pain to those who would gladly assist in putting him out of his misery.

The American flag is flying over vessels on 41 trade routes, it is announced. It took the war to drive us to do what for our own interest we should have done long ago.

New York's food administrator cannot understand why restaurants should advance prices 10 per cent. Perhaps it's a habit that they can't break.

One big argument for intervention in Mexico is that it might result in putting an end to these Francisco Villa stories.

The Problem of Underground Travel

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 29.—Underground travel has met with a serious difficulty, and it cannot achieve the great development which has been considered impossible until that difficulty has been removed.

Perhaps you did not realize that underground travel has a great future. As a matter of fact, travel through the earth is second in importance only to travel through the air, as a future means of speeding up transportation.

We have long had tunnels through hills and under rivers, and these tunnels have gradually become longer and longer with the development of engineering. At present tunnels are projected which will be considered impossible not many years ago. The states of New York and New Jersey are getting ready to connect themselves by a tunnel 8000 feet long under the Hudson river. Pittsburgh has made all plans for boring a hole nearly 6000 feet long through one of the mountains which make it so laborious in that city. Many similar projects exist in this country and Europe.

Chicago Planning Tunnels
In Chicago they are planning to have tunnels under some of the busiest streets, so that the heavier traffic will travel underground while the light vehicles have the surface. The growth of heavy truck traffic has almost certainly made such two-story streets a necessity in all large cities. In a word, the tendency is for traffic to burrow underground as well as to fly in the air.

But now all these projects where-by man proposes to rival the mole as well as the bird have been held up. The engineers, after a little time, have reached the realization that while they can build tunnels over a mile in length, they cannot guarantee that modern traffic will use them with safety. If a long string of automobiles enters one of these underground chambers, it is a gamble whether the drivers of them will live to the other end of the hole.

Deadly Poison Is Created
For internal combustion engines generate carbon monoxide, and carbon monoxide is a deadly poison. A good many men have been killed by this gas as a result of crawling under their machines when the engines were running. The gas at first intoxicates, somewhat, and then kills. It is generated by steam engines, and is the gas (or at least the principal of gas) which occasionally overcomes passengers when trains are stalled in tunnels. The Pennsylvania railroad, because of this gas, now uses electric engines in going through the tunnel just outside of Baltimore, which is an especially long and badly ventilated one.

Now if this gas can kill a man in a garage with one machine, what will it do when several thousand which are crowded into a long underground chamber? It is estimated with regard to the proposed new Hudson river tunnel that more than 8000 machines may pass through it within an hour. No one can now say positively whether the drivers of these machines would survive or not. For no one knows how much carbon monoxide a machine generates; the amount varies according to load, speed, carburetor adjustment, and many other factors. And no one knows how much carbon monoxide a human being can stand without becoming drunk or dying.

Until these things are found out by scientific test, the progress of underground travel is checked.

$100,000 Asked for Tests
The various engineers concerned with the building of these tunnels have appealed to the Bureau of Mines for help; the bureau is asking congress for $100,000 which will carry on tests and experiments in arranging with Yale university to begin the tests at once in a gas chamber, which the bureau will erect and the university will rent.

The Bureau of Mines is the one agency in the country qualified to make these tests because it has devoted much attention to the question of poisonous gases in mines. It also did a large part of the work in connection with the use of and defense against poison gases during the war. One of its chemists, A. C. Fieldner, had charge of gas mask investigations during the war, and is the man chiefly responsible for the development of an efficient gas mask. This man will have charge for the bureau of the experiments with regard to tunnel gases.

The bureau lacks a chamber in which to make the tests, and a physicist to study the effect of the gases on the human system. Both of these things will be furnished by Yale university. Dr. Yandel Henderson, a noted physiologist, will try to solve the problem of how much carbon monoxide a human being can stand.

Experiments Are Simple
The procedure as outlined is very simple. The gas chamber is to be 30 feet square and about 12 feet high and will be air tight when closed. Cars of all sorts will be driven into this chamber and run under all sorts of conditions, and tests will then be made to determine to what extent the air has been polluted by carbon monoxide and by other poisonous gases.

Students will then be called upon as volunteers to enter the poison gas chamber in order to determine the effects of the various mixtures of air and poison gas on the human system. It may occur to you that there will probably be no rush of volunteers for this duty. The suspicion may even arise that the experiments will come to an end for lack of human material. But the experimenters seem to have no doubts on this point. Of course, they will very carefully safeguard the students from serious injury. And it does seem to have been proved that volunteers for experiments, even when quite dangerous, can always be found.

Horses' Lungs to Be Tested
In addition to tests upon undergraduates, there will also be experiments with horses, especially with wind-broken horses. Dr. Henderson says that the so-called wind-broken horse usually suffers from heart disease, and is apt to die of heart failure. Such a horse would be especially liable to be overcome by carbon monoxide. When the scientists have determined what percentage of carbon monoxide in the air can safely be breathed by an elderly and wind-broken horse, they can recommend that mixture as safe for anyone.

The engineers who have charge of the ventilation of the tunnels can compute with exactitude how much air will flow through them. The experiments will inform them how much carbon monoxide may safely be mixed with that air, and how much of the deadly gas is produced by the average machine under average conditions. When this data is in their hands, they will begin to build their tunnels. Man's travels underground will go forward again.

Scranston, Pa.—Maryville, License Clerk, Katie Griffiths had the most unusual experience of her career when James Calgine, 25, applied for a license to wed his step-mother, Josephine Calgine, 24.

Clerk Griffiths, never having heard of such a proceeding, called in the county solicitor and pointed him out before he granted the license. There was no legal act to prevent such a marriage, the solicitor declared, and the license was granted. The wedding is to take place soon.

Calgine's father, who developed during the quizzing the couple were put through, married Josephine Ezio, a 17-year-old girl, five years ago. He was 27 years the senior of his second wife. Calgine died last February while his eldest son, James, was in France with the American army.

Upon the son's return a short time ago he found his step-mother with four small children. He fell in love with her and the agreed to become his wife.

THE POCKET TELEPHONE.
If you hear something buzzing in your upper left hand vest pocket you need pay no attention to it. It will not be a syncope of the heart but merely your pocket telephone trying to attract your attention.

Some genius has gone and invented the blamed thing just to show that geniuses like to meddle in other people's affairs.
There are quite a number of people here and there who like to get away from their office telephones occasionally and have a few minutes to themselves, but science, that meddlesome old dame, is their Nemesis. When the wireless telephone in the vest pocket buzzes or rings or squeaks or does whatever it does, you will have to answer. You cannot send your stenographer to say you are in conference, or that you have gone to lunch and please leave the number. When you go to lunch your telephone will go with you, whether you go to lunch or not.

When you leave home in the morning and try to leave your telephone on the bureau along with your tooth paste and your hairbrush, the wife will say: "George, don't forget your phone. I want to call you several times today." If she wishes and she probably will be, she will fasten your telephone around your neck with a paclock. You may tell her you would rather wear your telephone and shut your vest pocket for sentiment's sake, but that excuse will not go.

They say George Washington couldn't tell a lie. If he had had an office telephone, he would have learned how. The old boy had a snip. That was before the days of the insidious alibi which is always a boomerang.

He threw 'em in his cart.

"Don't Lurch Along on a Weak Memory," says an advertisement, and that is good advice. If you are accustomed to walking on your memory, but it is worn and fluted with rubber heels, for, as another advertisement says: "That is the Way to Avoid Headaches."

A good memory is a wonderful thing to have, but of course it depends somewhat upon the point of view and who has the good memory. A good memory in a bill collector is a blessing to the collector but a positive menace to the party who is being remembered. We have seen the time when we would not have given a nickel to possess the best memory in the world. In fact, we would have given $5 to have been fitted only with a full-fledged forgetter.

A man who can forget is often among the happiest of mortals.

SUIT ON MULBERGER ACT IS DISMISSED

(By Associated Press.) Milwaukee, Dec. 29.—A decision dismissing the suit of John Schreihart against the Manitowoc Products company was handed down by Judge E. A. Geiger in federal district court today. Lack of jurisdiction is the cause for dismissing the suit which involves the validity of the Mulberger act.

The board of directors of the Manitowoc company, a brewing company, had adopted a resolution declaring their intent to withdraw after January 15 with the brewing of beer containing 2 1/2 percent alcohol. Mr. Schreihart, a stockholder in the company, had asked for an injunction to prevent such action asserting that under the federal prohibition act, the manufacturing of such a beverage would be illegal and would result in the confiscation of the company's property, thus causing him personal loss.

In the decision Judge Geiger says in part:

"The bill tenders for dispute or opens to controversy no matter except that pertaining to the fact of threatened violation of the prohibition act or of any dispute or controversy requiring consideration of any United States law at the plaintiff's instance. Clearly not, it for the jurisdiction of the federal court, that fact must be assumed. It follows necessarily that the plaintiff sets up a cause of action disclosing not the slightest claim, dispute or controversy involving the effect or interpretation of any law of the United States essential to be determined to the end that plaintiff be given his relief."

RED CROSS STAMP SALE NETS $1,100

Rev. Henry Willmann, secretary of the Anti-tuberculosis association in this city, reported today that more than $1,100 has been sent in from citizens here for Red Cross Christmas seals. There are still many who have not sent in their money.

Rev. Willmann urges them to do so at once as he wishes to send the proceeds to Milwaukee by Saturday. Rev. Willmann believes the sale this year will equal the amount cleared 2 years ago, when the seals were distributed in the same manner. There was no sale of seals last year because of the Red Cross drive at Christmas time.

Miss Colleen Moore about to fry an egg for eight.

Miss Colleen Moore, the pretty little screen star in the picture, has taken very domestic in the kitchen and the cook stove. Miss Colleen is going to be an efficient cook, if she is anything, for instead of trying a half dozen or more of eggs when eggs are so high she has decided to make one egg do for the whole family. It is no ordinary egg who is going to cook either. It is one of the very largest ostrich eggs she could find on the Cawston ostrich farm, which is near Los Angeles, California. The ostrich eggs weigh from three to five pounds each and will serve eight persons according to course. It is none of our affairs, but we think she ought to watch what she is doing for it surely looks as if there were too much egg in that shell for one frying pan.

New Sport Hats Show Great Variety

These four hats picked at random from the stock of a leading New York milliner show the attractive variety of sports styles which will prevail during the mid-winter season. At the upper left is a snappy little turban of soft brown chinchilla cord. The very long silk tassel is of orange color, which gives a youthful touch to the already youthful shape. The narrow gold braid on the upward rolling brim of the beige velvet hat at the lower left gives a rather dressy appearance to an otherwise plain every-day hat. Yet this bit of unusual trimming in no way detracts from the practical purpose for which the hat was designed. This hat will look smart with coat and suit alike and here it is worn with one of the new brushed wool scarfs in vogue this season.
Brown velvet and tan chinchilla made of straw braid or ribbon, but combining to make the snug fitting hat this winter add a touch of elegance at the lower right. This, too, is a suit-velour hand stitched. It is faced, able for wear with the suit or great with brown ducetyn. A band of gold braid and may be worn at any time ribbon which ties gracefully in the front. The only trimming. This is an especially good model for motor-type is the true sports model and ing wear. The hat at the upper right while it may be worn for shopping is modeled after a popular summer and town wear, it is really made for sports model. The summer hats were country wear.

The Golden Age

Every art has its Golden Age, bringing those wondrous works that live on through all the years. And it seems that a Golden Age has dawned for the newest of all arts—the motion picture. The master artist of the screen has brought to us a creation of such exquisite wonder and beauty, of such haunting charm and purity, that all else seems as of yesterday.
D. W. GRIFFITH'S
"BROKEN BLOSSOMS"
taken from a story of Thomas Burke, is at once the most pitiful, most tragic, and withal, the most sublime love story ever told. And in the telling, the master, Griffith, has wrought such rare and undreamed of beauties that a new art, full, rich, boundless, is revealed.

Other building activity was increased in like proportion, including new factories, stores, factory additions and store additions, churches, new hotel, started ware houses, etc. In all 445 building permits were issued in 1919 as compared with 343 in 1918.

"You think that strange? I did trust you, Lieutenant Knox, and I trusted you more completely than I ever did before. But—but I didn't know you were a spy. You were endeavoring to rescue Rene from slavery. I could not conceive what interest you might find in should confess myself Elise. You were strange to me; we were there alone with the negro, and—and somehow it seemed a protection to me to claim a drop of black blood.
Twice I thought to tell you—the words were on my lips—but something stopped me. Possibly, just a little, I was afraid of you."
"Then—but not now?"
"No, not now—not even a little;
you have proven yourself all I ever thought you would be. I am glad—glad—to say to you now, I am Elise Beard."
She stopped suddenly, the word
had interested her, she was fading from her lips. "My God!" she burst forth.
"But I am not! I am not! Why, I never felt the horror of it all before—that I was Elise Beard!"
A moment she stood motionless, seemingly to hold her breath, her eyes open, struck silent by the intense biterness of that cry. Then, with a start, she turned, and said that I must turn her thoughts elsewhere.
"Do not say that, or even think it,"
I urged, scarcely able to restrain myself from grasping her in my arms.
If it could prove true—legally true—some way of escape will be found. The others are safe, and you are going to need all your courage.
Please me to forget, to ignore this thing. I need you."
Her hands felt nervous and her questioning eyes sought my face.
"You are right, Lieutenant Knox,"
she said, "I owe my loyalty now to you. I shall not yield again to despair; you may trust me—my friend."
The day was not ended when we finally retraced our way across the narrow dikes to the mainland, prepared to resume our journey. The passage was slow and dangerous, and we made it on foot, leading the horses. The woods were already beginning to darken as we forded the north branch of the creek and came forth through a fringe of forest trees into a country of rolling hills and narrow valleys. The two girls were already mounted, and Tim and I were busily tightening the straps of a night ride when, from behind us, a dark shape in the direction of the pen-sula we had just quitted, there

MUSCLES WERE TIED IN KNOTS

"Since I began taking Tanlac I feel at least twenty years younger,
and I never expect to be without it again," said John Kennedy, a place of the Fawcett farm, Janesvillereger Company, crane manufacturer, and who resides at 348 "Thirty-Third Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., recently.
Continuing he said:
"I never could have believed before I started taking Tanlac that there was a medicine in the world which could do any or much good in so short a time as it has me.
For years I have suffered with a bad stomach trouble. My appetite was very poor, and what little I did manage to eat I simply had to force down. I was bothered a great deal with formation of gas and would have something to eat after each meal. I would have sharp pains in my chest and my heart would palpitate terribly. I also suffered with rheumatism in my shoulders, neck and back and in the muscles of my legs and wrist joints. If I became the least bit chilled from cold it would seem like the muscles of my legs were tied in knots. I was so nervous I could get but little sleep, and felt tired and run down all the time, and while I managed to keep going I should have been in bed as I was not actually able to be up and about. I would have to get up and about nearly all the time, and at times would have such dizzy spells
I was with the greatest effort I could keep from falling. Nothing I ate tasted right to me, and I lost at least twenty-five pounds in weight, and was gradually getting worse and worse all the time.
I was in this bad condition when my son, who had been taking Tanlac with remarkable results, advised me to try it, and it proved to be one of the best favors he could have done me, for as soon as I began taking it my improvement was apparently wonderful. I have a fine appetite and am hungry all the time. I can eat anything I want and am never troubled with gas, those pains in my chest or palpitations of the heart, and, in fact, everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. The rheumatism has almost entirely disappeared and at night and have not the headache or those dizzy spells since I started taking Tanlac. I feel just like a new man, and I know I owe it all to Tanlac."
Tanlac is sold in Janesville by Mc-Cue and Buss and all leading druggists in every city.

THE WISHING PLANE

When Jack and Jane and their friends arrived in Constantinople the children noticed, first of all, the many different dresses worn by the men and women. Some of the men wore shirts and full-length trousers, made very baggy. Over this dress they wore a gown or jacket, and their neck to their feet. In place of a hat they wore a fez, a round red hat with a tassel on top, which Jack and Jane already knew about, having seen them in pictures many times.
Other men had no gowns on. They wore shirts, little jackets and baggy trousers which they tied at the ankles or fastened only below the knees.
Those who had the short pants were stockings or leggings. They, too, were the men. The women wore long, flowing gowns. Across the lower part of their faces they wore veils that hid their nose and mouth. Jack and Jane noticed, though, that many of the people they saw on the streets who looked like Turks had adopted clothes much like we folks at home wore. They had laid aside the old-time Turkish costume. This was true of the women as well as the men.
"You see," explained Ladydee to Jane, "the Turkish women want the same privileges their husbands and fathers and brothers have. They have shown that they can be just as brilliant and modestly dressed as are the other European women as they were with the long, flowing robes and veils over their faces."
The children soon found that practically all of the streets in the big city for Constantinople as big as many of our great American cities—were narrow, dirty, crooked roads without paving. The buildings along them were woefully small. Most of the shops were so little that the customer couldn't enter them. The children noticed that the folk who wanted to purchase cloth, food or other things stood on the walk outside the shop and the store keeper waited on them from the inside. He had just barely room in which to move around.
The children peered into some of the houses along the streets and found that they, too, were dirty places. The rooms were very small.
Jack and Jane noticed that buildings that resembled our churches were very numerous in the city. They passed many of them.
"They have many churches here, Ladydee," said Jack finally.
"There are said to be about 500 of them in the city," replied Ladydee.
"They aren't called churches, though.
They are known as mosques. It is in these places that the Turks worship." The Turks are Mohammedans, you know."
Now, of course, neither Jack nor Jane knew what Mohammedans were, so Ladydee proceeded to tell them. But we'll have to wait until tomorrow for her explanation.

RAYMOND T. BAKER.
(By Niskala.)
A DIRECTOR'S MEETING.
The directors of the American Legion from all over the country have been having a meeting in the War Risk Insurance building to talk about. They meet in a large room, about the size of a large room,
full of shiny yellow tables and chairs and blue with cigar smoke. Into this room there blundered the other day, a very inexperienced, peevish and unkind woman reporter. One of the kind gentlemen gave her a chair at a long table and a pile of minutes
two inches thick with the suggestion that she glance through them to get the gist of the meeting, and left her to her own despairing bewilderment.
It was the smoke that bothered this fair reporter. She perceived that many men were sitting around in the hard, dry, frowning, sleepy, knowing mood peculiar to men at meetings. She heard them say, one after the other, and make complicated and formal remarks to the chairman. But all these goings on were so shrouded in a mist of smoke that she felt her way through them and helpless. A gentleman from Columbia arose, giving a dimly wavering impression through the haze, and announced that there was suddenly work about to dissolve the War Risk Bureau. Senator Smoot, no less, had declared that he wanted it abolished as a department wholly incapable of carrying on the work. The gentleman from Columbia, one Jones by name, pleaded that Smoot should be thanked with an earnest wish that his appointment by President Wilson
as a cabinet member. During the war Secretary Lane sponsored a comprehensive plan for offering thousands of farm sites to returned soldiers.

WHOS WHO
in the Day's News

FRANKLIN K. LANE.
Reports that Franklin K. Lane planned to resign as secretary of the interior recently brought from Lane
the frank admission that he contemplated "going out of the cabinet," but that he has refrained from speaking to the president
about it due to the president's illness.
Lane is one of the few original
members of Wilson's cabinet. The secretary was born on Princes
Edward Island,
Canada, July 17,
1864. His family moved to California when he was a young lad.
He graduated from the university of California.
He entered the newspaper game as a reporter, became New York correspondent for western papers. Then he became editor of the To-moka, Wash., Daily News. He was admitted to the bar in 1899 and began his law practice in San Francisco. He was corporate counsel in Prisco from 1897-1902 and then became a candidate for governor of California. He received the party nomination for U. S. senator the following year. He served as a member of the interstate commerce commission from 1905 until his appointment by President Wilson
as a cabinet member. During the war Secretary Lane sponsored a comprehensive plan for offering
thousands of farm sites to returned
soldiers.
